Zad. 1 (wszystkie części czyta ta sama dziewczyna)

Text 1.1

Yesterday evening I wanted to send a funny message about our maths test to my best friend. I wrote it quickly on my phone and added a laughing emoji. A moment later, I realised I had sent it to the class group chat instead. My phone started buzzing immediately.

Text 1.2

When I opened the chat again, I saw screenshots appearing everywhere. Some classmates were laughing, others were asking who the message was about. I felt really embarrassed and didn't know whether to explain or stay silent.

Text 1.3

A few minutes later, my best friend texted me privately. She said, "Don't worry, it happens to everyone. Just be careful next time." Her message really helped me calm down.

Text 1.4

Later that day, I decided to write a short message to the class, explaining that the text wasn't meant to offend anyone. Surprisingly, most people reacted kindly and the situation ended better than I expected.

Text 1.5

After everything that happened, I changed my phone settings. I checked my privacy options and promised myself to always double-check the recipient before sending a message.

Zad. 2

2.1 (dziewczyna)

I only wanted to send a joke to my best friend, but I accidentally posted it in the class group chat. At first, people thought it was funny, but then someone complained to the teacher. I realised that even harmless messages can cause problems if they reach the wrong people.

2.2 (chłopak)

I sent a message about my teammate during a game, complaining that he wasn't trying hard enough. Unfortunately, I sent it directly to him instead of my friend. It was really awkward, but we talked later and cleared things up.

2.3 (dziewczyna)

I shared a private screenshot in what I thought was a small group. It turned out the group had over twenty people in it. Since then, I always double-check who can see my messages.

2.4 (chłopak)

I wrote something angry in a hurry and sent it without thinking. After a few minutes, I wished I could delete it, but it was too late. That mistake taught me to calm down before typing anything online.

Zad. 3. (dziewczyna)

After the lesson, my teacher asked me to stay behind.

Apparently, someone had complained about a message I posted in our class chat.

I explained that it was only meant as a joke, but the teacher said jokes can still hurt people.

She told me to think twice before posting anything online.

I apologised straight away, but she also explained that messages spread very fast on the internet.

That conversation made me realise I need to be more responsible when using group chats.

Zad. 4.

4.1 (dziewczyna – ten sam głos w całym ćwiczeniu)

I didn't mean to upset anyone. It was supposed to be a joke, but now I realise it wasn't funny for everyone.

4.2 (dziewczyna)

The teacher asked me to explain what happened in the class chat and why I posted that message.

4.3 (dziewczyna)

Someone in my class felt uncomfortable and reported the message to the teacher.

4.4 (dziewczyna)

After that conversation, I know I need to be more careful about what I post online.
